Dear editor:

The manuscript titled: Variation analysis of Banyumas local salak (Salacca zalacca) based on leaf anatomy and RAPD marker was interesting. The RAPD amplification in figure 4 was very successful and very nice amplification. I'd like to suggest to accept with minor revision.

1. We usually take 40 cycles, instead of 45, for RAPD amplification.
2. Most of reference is out of the date, there are missing the literatures within 5 years. The author should update some references.

Thanks!

Dear Dr.Ahmad Dwi Setyawa,

I have gone through the manuscript " Variation analysis of Banyumas salak (Salacca zalacca) based on leaf anatomy and RAPD markers"

The article needs major revision. My comments are marked on the MS. as annotations (scanned copy enclosed). In general the manuscript is poorly written and data not properly analysed and described. The method section , in particular, needs major revision including how genetic diversity and genetic distance analysis is worked out.

Furthermore, there is too much "text book" information rather than analysis of the data and its interpretation vis-a-vis recent studies. The language in general is poor, involved with many syntax mistakes.

With regards,

Emeritus professor Dr
